Wounded Salem Twp. boy conscious

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — The 5-year-old boy injured in a Salem Township home where his grandmother was killed, is awake but not really talking, according to Sheriff Ray Stone.

Investigators went again Thursday afternoon to Akron Children's Hospital to speak with Cole Tyler Reed, who was at the home when the woman he considered his mother, Melinda Todd, 43, was killed. Reed reportedly is giving thumbs up and thumbs down hand signals, but not speaking.

The boy's grandfather, Chris Milson, said on Tuesday the boy suffered from a shooting injury to the left side of his head. He was taken on Monday afternoon to Salem Community Hospital and flown to Akron Children's Hospital soon after, where he underwent surgery.

Stone said he is still awaiting a copy of the coroner's preliminary report on Thursday, which is expected to provide information on cause of death and a possible time frame. The body of Todd was sent to the coroner's office in Summit County for an autopsy.

Investigators have continued to work on leads throughout the day Thursday, but no arrest had been made.

The body of Todd and the injured child were found by Todd's daughters when they got off the bus Monday afternoon.

Council, landlords agree on rent rules

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

Village Council has reached an apparent resolution with rental property owners regarding a proposed renter registration ordinance presented last month.

At a Zoning Committee meeting Wednesday night attended by several rental property owners, council agreed to have Village Solicitor Walter Newton redraft the original ordinance and present it as a new one at a later meeting. Presented with the purpose of revealing occupants living in rental units in the village so that the tenants can be cited for zoning violations instead of the property owner, the re-drafted ordinance will include several changes to appease the concerns of the landlords, who opposed the ordinance Zoning Inspector John Rydarowicz presented at the Nov. 21 meeting.

The new ordinance will no longer include a requirement to purchase insurance, eliminate the fourth-degree misdemeanor penalty for not registering tenants over the age of 18, only require a property agent for out-of-state owners and require the Zoning Department to issue renewal reminders to property owners.

The landlords responded at the last council meeting to the first reading of the ordinance in November with a letter from an attorney the group of owners solicited with intentions to challenge the ordinance if it passed as presented. The group did not like that rental property owners would have to purchase insurance when private and commercial property owners do not, that the owners would be required to open rental units to inspection and that a property agent would be required for owners residing 10 miles outside village limits. The group also took offense to council passing a first reading of the ordinance after allegedly previously agreeing to first discuss the matter with the landlords.

Crashes in East Palestine

East Palestine Fire/EMS transported Louis Gilbert to St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Boardman after he went off the right side off state Route 14 near the intersection of state Route 165 in Unity Township. Gilbert, driving a dump truck for Sebastiani Trucking Inc. of Canfield, struck two culverts and sheared off a utility pole before coming to rest across a driveway close to a home on Route 14. State Patrol Trooper Eric Carroll is investigating the crash. (Salem News photos by Patti Schaeffer)

State Trooper Steve Tucci is investigating another crash on state Route 14 that happened shortly after the dump truck crash a little farther south on state Route 14. John Smollen of East Palestine drove off the right side of N. Pleasant Ave. coming to rest precariously above a culvert and stream after pulling across in front of Richard Rubeck of Columbiana driving a PGT Trucking semi south on state Route 14. Rubeck braked hard missing Smollen as he shot across Route 14. Both drivers were uninjured. Smollen was cited for failure to yield.

Salvation Army, Walmart team up for kids

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — Shoppers can help the Salvation Army grant Christmas wishes of area families by filling a truck with toys, coats and clothes at the Salem Walmart from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

"We'll take any donation of new coats or toys for kids for the holiday season," Salem Salvation Army Lt. Jason Price said Thursday.

As part of a nationwide effort, Walmart and the Salvation Army have teamed up to Fill the Truck for Kids, an event to gather unwrapped gifts across the country to distribute to families and children in need.

Price said this is the first year for the joint partnership event. A U-Haul truck will be parked at Walmart on East State Street during the day for people to donate items such as toys, coats and other clothing. He asked that people don't wrap the gifts so they can distribute them to the appropriate age group.

The Salvation Army already had signups for their Christmas program, but he said they've been getting calls every day and now have a waiting list for people needing help.

"There is a larger need in the community this year and more kids we're trying to help," he said, noting the numbers have risen from about 650 children last year to closer to 700 this year.

He blamed the rising numbers on the economy, saying that the times are hurting more families and they're looking for assistance this year.

"If we don't do good on Saturday, we might not have enough toys to fill the applications," he said.

In that case, they'll have to use cash donations to purchase toys to meet the need. He said kids like toys of any kind, so they're not looking for certain types. Board games are always a good choice, along with dolls, action figures or movies.

Price and his wife Kristin, also a Lieutenant with the Salvation Army, have been in the Salem community

Houston-based firm to treat wastewater for Chesapeake

By LARRY SHIELDS
Staff Writer

SALEM — A Houston-based environmental and energy services company is planning to build a wastewater treatment facility in Carroll County for Chesapeake Energy.

Tervita Corporation uses hybrid water recycling technology that can remove hydrocarbons and suspended solids from produced water, top-hole drilling water and well pad rain water.

In a prepared release on Thursday, the company said it was awarded the contract to treat Chesapeake water in its Utica shale production in Ohio.

The process will help to help Chesapeake efficiently continue its Aqua Renew program by recycling water in its operations.

Tervita said there is also an option to implement mobile water treatment technology.

In addition to these services to Chesapeake Energy, Tervita said it can provide hardness removal, well site sludge and ponds treatment, if necessary.

Company officials were unable to get back with details on Thursday regarding the exact siting, acreage, number of employs and capital investment for the facility.

Carroll County Commissioner Thomas A. Wheaton returned a call on the answering machine but could not be reached for comment later on.

nity for us to partner with one of the major players in the Utica by recycling and reusing a resource as vital as water."

"Tervita's water treatment capabilities and technologies, paired with our integrated service offerings, are invaluable to our customers as they continue to put more effort into responsible and sustainable resource development."

Tervita can also deploy its proprietary Mobile Processing System to

Today is Friday, Dec. 7, the 342nd day of 2012. There are 24 days left in the year. Ten years ago: Iraq handed over its long-awaited arms declaration to the United Nations, denying it had doomsday weapons. Five years ago: Congressional Democrats demanded a full Justice Department investigation into whether the CIA had obstructed justice by destroying videotapes documenting the harsh 2002 interrogations of two alleged terrorists. One year ago: Rod Blagojevich, the ousted Illinois governor whose three-year battle against criminal charges became a national spectacle, was sentenced to 14 years in prison.

Raising Medicare age saves money but could lead to higher premiums for seniors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are living longer, and Republicans want to raise the Medicare eligibility age as part of any deal to reduce the government’s huge deficits.

But what sounds like a prudent sacrifice for an aging society that must watch its budget could have some surprising consequences, including higher premiums for people on Medicare.

Unlike tax hikes, which spawn hard partisan divisions, increasing the Medicare age could help ease a budget compromise because President Barack Obama has previously been willing to consider it. A worried AARP, the seniors’ lobby, is already running ads knocking down the idea as a quick fix that would cause long-term problems. House Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., doesn’t like it either.

But for Republicans seeking more than just tweaks to benefit programs, raising the current eligibility age of 65 has become a top priority, a symbol of their drive to rein in government. If Obama and the GOP can’t agree soon on a budget outline, it may trigger tax increases and spending cuts that would threaten a fragile economic recovery.

Increasing the eligibility age to 67 would reduce Medicare spending by about 5 percent annually, compounding into hundreds of billions of dollars over time. But things aren’t that simple.

Sen. Jim DeMint, tea party instigator, resigning his Carolina Senate seat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jim DeMint, patron saint of the tea party and a would-be Republican kingmaker, announced suddenly Thursday he would resign his South Carolina seat to head Washington’s conservative Heritage Foundation think tank, a shift that reverberated through a soul-searching GOP.

Just two years into a second, six-year term, DeMint said he would step down on Jan. 1 to helm Heritage while continuing the conservative fight. The 61-year-old lawmaker, known to hurry home to South Carolina nearly every weekend, had signaled that this term would be his last, but his abrupt announcement shocked even his closest Republican colleagues.

Prizing ideology over electability, DeMint sometimes infuriated fellow Republicans, picking sides in GOP primaries with decidedly mixed results. He had no patience for centrist Republicans, pushing the party to the right while bankrolling candidates with millions from his political action committee, the Senate Conservatives Fund. In 2010, candidates he ardently supported cost the GOP eminently winnable seats. This year, DeMint had better success.

Egypt’s president offers nothing to de-fuse political crisis after 6 die in clashes

CAIRO (AP) — An angry Mohammed Morsi refused

Thursday to call off a referendum on a disputed constitution that has sparked Egypt’s worst political crisis in two years, drawing chants of “topple the regime!” from protesters who waved their shoes in contempt.

The Egyptian president’s uncompromising stand came a night after thousands of his supporters and opponents fought pitched battles outside his Cairo palace, leaving at least six dead and 700 injured.

Speaking in a nationally televised address, Morsi accused some in the opposition of serving remnants of Hosni Mubarak’s authoritarian regime and vowed he would never tolerate anyone working for the overthrow of his “legitimate” government.

That brought shouts of “the people want to topple the regime!” from the crowd of 30,000 Morsi opponents — the same chant used in the protests that brought down Mubarak.

Morsi also invited the opposition to a “comprehensive and productive” dialogue starting Saturday at his presidential palace, but gave no sign that he might offer any meaningful concessions.

NATO moves toward Patriot missile deployment on Syria border

BEIRUT (AP) — As fears grow in the West that Syrian President Bashar Assad will unleash chemical weapons as an act of desperation, NATO moved forward Thursday with its plan to place Patriot missiles and troops along Syria’s border with Turkey to protect against potential attacks.

Assad’s regime blasted the move as “psychological warfare,” saying the new deployment would not deter it from seeking victory over rebels it views as terrorists.

The missile deployment sends a clear message to Assad that consequences will follow if he uses chemical weapons or strikes NATO member Turkey, which backs the rebels seeking his ouster. But its limited scope also reflects the low appetite in Western capitals for direct military intervention in the civil war.

The U.S. and many European and Arab countries called for Assad to step down early in the uprising but have struggled to make that happen. Russia and China have protected Assad from censure by the U.N. Security Council, and the presence of extremists among the rebels makes the U.S. and others nervous about arming them.

In Dublin, Ireland, U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton joined Russia’s foreign minister and the U.N. peace envoy to the Arab country for three-way talks that suggested Washington and Moscow were working toward a common strategy as the Assad regime weakens.

Official: Evidence indicates bodies in wildlife area are 2 Iowa cousins

EVANSDALE, Iowa (AP) — Northeast Iowa residents who have been holding out hope that two young cousins missing for five months might be home for Christmas were grappling Thursday with the news that hunters likely found the girls’ bodies.

Autopsies by the state medical examiner’s office were still under way, but the remains are believed to be those of Lyric Cook and Elizabeth Collins, who were 10 and 8 when they did not come back from riding their bikes July 13, Black Hawk County sheriff’s Capt. Rick Abben said.

East Liverpool High evacuated after threat

By JO ANN BOBBY-GILBERT
Staff Writer

EAST LIVERPOOL — East Liverpool High School was evacuated for about an hour Thursday afternoon when writing was found on a bathroom stall door that indicated an explosion could be expected that afternoon.

Superintendent James Herring said a student entered a second-floor restroom at 2:05 p.m. and noticed writing on the inside of a stall door reading, “BOOM,” with “2:16 p.m.” written underneath. Off to the side was a drawing that Herring said resembled a stick of dynamite.

The student notified school officials just as the bell rang for class change, meaning kids were in the hallways, according to Herring, who said once halls cleared, the evacuation began by 2:08 p.m.

Students and staff were sent to the Trinity Presbyterian Church parking lot, with city police and fire departments arriving within minutes.

Herring said he made it to the high school by 2:13 p.m. from his offices downtown and safety forces were already on the scene, preparing to search the building.

With administrators along to unlock doors, police officers, firefighters and Herring began a thorough, floor-by-floor search of the main building and by 2:52 p.m., the entire complex had been covered. The field house and vocational complex were also searched by school personnel.

Meanwhile, Herring said, drivers had lined their school buses up at the church lot, ready to pick up students, who were then allowed to go back to their lockers and retrieve coats and other belongings that had been left behind during the evacuation.

The last bus pulled out by 3:10 p.m. with no one injured and nothing found in any of the buildings.

Principal Randy Taylor sent an all-call message out to parents of both high school and middle school students, advising of the situation and assuring them the emergency response had been put into place.

Herring praised the police and fire departments for their prompt and well-manned response and also school staff and the students, saying, “They were very well-behaved. It was very orderly. The building was evacuated in five minutes, and you’re talking a thousand people. I hand it to them for doing it well.”

Meanwhile, surveillance video of the area leading to the restroom will be reviewed and any student seen entering the room that day before the message was found will be considered a suspect and will be interviewed, Herring emphasized.

“We have to take everything seriously anymore,” he said.

As for someone who would make such a threat, Herring said, “I don’t know what’s in their minds. I don’t think they realize the punishment (for such an act). They would be gone for the rest of the year; that’s board policy.”

Referring to a similar incident at Beaver Local last week, Herring said, “In my opinion, it’s like a virus. If it happens one place, it’s going to happen some place else. I won’t be surprised if it happens some place else now. It’s sad. Nothing was accomplished by doing this.”

A choir concert scheduled at the school last night was to go on as planned, although Herring said custodial staff was directed to notify administrators immediately if they saw anything that “looked funny.”

Herring encouraged any student who knows anything about the incident to come forward and tell school officials.

Earlier in the day, the fire department had responded to the school building for a gas smell, but it was found the odor was coming from a student whose home has a kerosene heater, according to fire officials.

SALEM FIRE

— Firefighters were called at 8:31 a.m. Thursday to Emmanuel Lutheran Church, 291 S. Broadway Ave., where a person was stuck in a stalled el-elevator. Elevator keys were used to rescue the person.

— Firefighters pumped water out of a basement in the 200 block of Ohio Avenue after being notified by the apartment owner at 2:31 p.m. Wednes-day about a flood due to a water pipe break. The gas was shut off to one of the furnaces and one hot water tank because the pilot light was extin-guished by the water.

— A fire was put out after the department was called at 12:53 p.m. Wednesday to the 2500 block of East State Street for an open burning complaint which turned out to be an illegal fire. A person at the scene re-ported being hired by the owner to clean up the property.

— An odor of smoke was reported at 10:30 p.m. Tuesday by a resident in the 200 block of Hawley Avenue where a light odor of smoke on the first floor was detected and appeared to be coming from the basement. She had waited 20 minutes before calling the fire department. The basement was checked with the thermal imaging camera, but nothing was found. The furnace was also working okay, but the resident said they were using the dryer around the same time the odor began. The odor of smoke was coming from the dryer, so it was unplugged and the gas turned off. The resident was told to have the dryer checked and not to overload it in the future.

Postal worker to plead guilty to mail theft

COLUMBUS (AP) — A U.S. Postal Service worker will plead guilty to charges accusing him of stealing cash and gift cards from mail at a central Ohio processing center and as-saulting officers.

Federal authorities say Postal Service agents saw Terrence McLean open envelopes and remove the contents while sort-ing mail in June at the Columbus center and put mail in his sock and down his pants.

Agents say McLean punched and bit them when they ar-rested him.

Documents filed Thursday in federal court in Columbus say McLean will plead guilty to 71 counts of mail theft, 12 counts of receiving stolen mail and two counts of assaulting a federal officer.

Investigators say they recovered 71 first-class letters, 20 gift cards and $341 in cash when searching McLean.

SHERIFF

— A Purton Road, Wellsville, man reported at 10:15 p.m. Wednesday, he heard possible gunshots. Deputies checked the area, but did not locate any-one shooting.

— A Northview Lane, Lisbon, man reported at 5:57 p.m. Wednesday there was a suspicious vehicle in the area. Deputies checked, but found no parked cars.

— Candy Campbell, Gavers Road, Hanoverton, reported at 8:57 p.m. Wednesday her boyfriend Beau McGuire was trying to kill her. Deputies found Campbell lying on the floor of McGuire’s trailer. She claimed she was as-saulted by McGuire, and he claimed he was assaulted by her. McGuire was charged with assault and taken to the county jail. Campbell was transported to Salem Community Hospital and then charged with assault.

Columbus man sentenced to 12 months for failure to comply

LISBON — Lennell L. Walton, 33, Columbus, was sen-tenced in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court to 12 months in prison with credit for 89 days already served. Wal-ton pleaded guilty on Tuesday for failure to comply with the order of a police officer. Court documents state Walton fled Patrolman Chris Davis of the St. Clair Township police, driv-ing at high rates of speed and in opposing lanes of travel.

Paul J. Kern Jr., 32, Wood Street, East Palestine, was sen-tenced to 10 months in prison for complicity to burglary. The sentence is to run consecutively to a sentence in Mahoning County Common Pleas Court. He was credited here with 30 days served. In this county, Kern reportedly assisted two oth-ers in the burglary of the home of Doug Smith, College Street, Rogers on Nov. 18, 2011.

Cathleen H. Smail, 51, Campbell, was sentenced to 20 days in the county jail after she was found in violation of her inter-vention in lieu of conviction for receiving stolen property. The intervention is dishonorably terminated. According to court documents, Smail in October 2007 took a purse belonging to Janice Oyer and containing both a credit card and Moun-taineer Resort swipe card.

Craig Urbach, 21, Metz Road, New Waterford, was sen-tenced to an indefinite term at the Eastern Ohio Correctional Center and a term of four years probation for complicity to burglary and complicity to safecracking. On June 30, 2011 Urbach reportedly assisted another man, Jonathan P. Cun-ningham, by driving him to the home of Glenn Wells, Alder-lick Road, Wellsville, and waiting for him to return with guns and helping him hide items stolen from a safe within the house.

OUR SIDE

Dec. 7, 1941 lives forever in infamy

It was the most profound sneak attack in the history of man. At exactly 7:55 a.m., on Dec. 7, 1941, the United States was suddenly plunged into a great conflict that would become World War II. The Imperial Japanese Navy struck at Pearl Harbor. And struck hard. The United States' Pacific Fleet was ravaged. The Japanese sank four battleships, three cruisers and three destroyers. Destroyed were 188 American aircraft. Wounded were 1,282 service personnel. The American death total numbered 2,402.

What took the Japanese mere minutes to do on a beautiful Hawaiian Sunday morning was destined to forever alter world history. The attack — a surprise and unprovoked — stirred patriotism which remains unchallenged. Public opinion, which had favored isolationism, emerged as support for direct participation in the war. The sleeping giant had indeed been rudely awakened. He was angry.

The United States did participate in war. It won wars on both sides of the globe. It is a near incomprehensible feat that ranks as the greatest achievement in our country's history.

Today, on the anniversary of the brutal attack by the Japanese, let us remember all of the lives lost; all of the lives forever changed and all of the sacrifices made. We are the greatest nation ever and it is because of the unbelievable effort and wherewithal that Americans displayed during World War II. That should never be lost on any of us.

Just as we suggested this past Veterans Day, let's pause and thank those served. It is sad that advancing time is claiming so many of our World War II veterans, many of whom fought the Japanese in the Pacific Ocean Theater. We have many veterans in our own area. Take time to thank them. Let's strive to pass along to our children and future generations the importance of appreciating the efforts made to keep the American way preserved.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt was right when he declared that Dec. 7, 1941, was a date that would live in infamy. It has and always will.

Time to declare ceasefire in politics of class warfare

One outgrowth of President Obama's re-election, based on my mailbag of reader gripes, has been an intensification of "class warfare" in American politics: the notion of the haves against the have-nots, re-phrased more recently as the makers against the takers.

An unusual number of Mitt Romney voters have written that their candidate had it right in that taped statement to a closed fund-raiser, when he said that "47 percent of Americans" were beyond his reach because they were bribed with government handouts.

Obama's strategists seized on this videotaped observation as a major political gaffe, and threw the Republican nominee onto the defensive. Many readers responded by blaming the news media messengers for reporting this political reality. They have continued the lament for weeks after the election.

"When are you idiots going to realize that Obama and Biden are socialists whose goal is selling out our country?" writes one irate reader from Skokie, Ill. "Everything he (Romney) said was true, which is precisely why our country is going to hell in a hand basket. And the 'reporting' by you and your kind only make it work (sic)."

Another e-mail, from Arlington, Va., offers: "Liberal-minded journalists like you have helped transform the country from one based on hard work and Christian ethics to one based on entitlements, victim mentality and 'free stuff.' You're the loser, not Romney."

A third says: "It is a socialist point of view by 'sharing the wealth' making them (the rich) pay more taxes. ... It rewards mediocrity (somewhat like the people who work for government — no incentive to do better). How can Obama think that penalizing successful people to pay for his programs is good for our country?"

These are the more temperate selections from my mailbag. Others reek with profane insults, references to "B. Hussein" and other slurs that demean the very message the writer seeks to convey. God bless freedom of speech. Taken together, the writers seem either vexed or baffled that Romney's characterization of nearly half the American people as moochers would cause a negative stir and similar press commentary.

There's a certain irony in the fact that Romney, who labored so long and so hard to persuade American voters that he was not different from them for all his great wealth, would only reinforce their doubts about him with such a cold put-down of the hoi polloi.

To make matters worse, he repeated the essence of his class-warfare allegations after the election in a phone conference with some other big donors.

Now that the election is over, many Republican leaders are either running away from Romney or signaling that they see no leadership role for him in reshaping and rebuilding their party. But apparently a core of support remains for his suggestion that the takers of American society from the over-taxed makers of its goodies did him in.

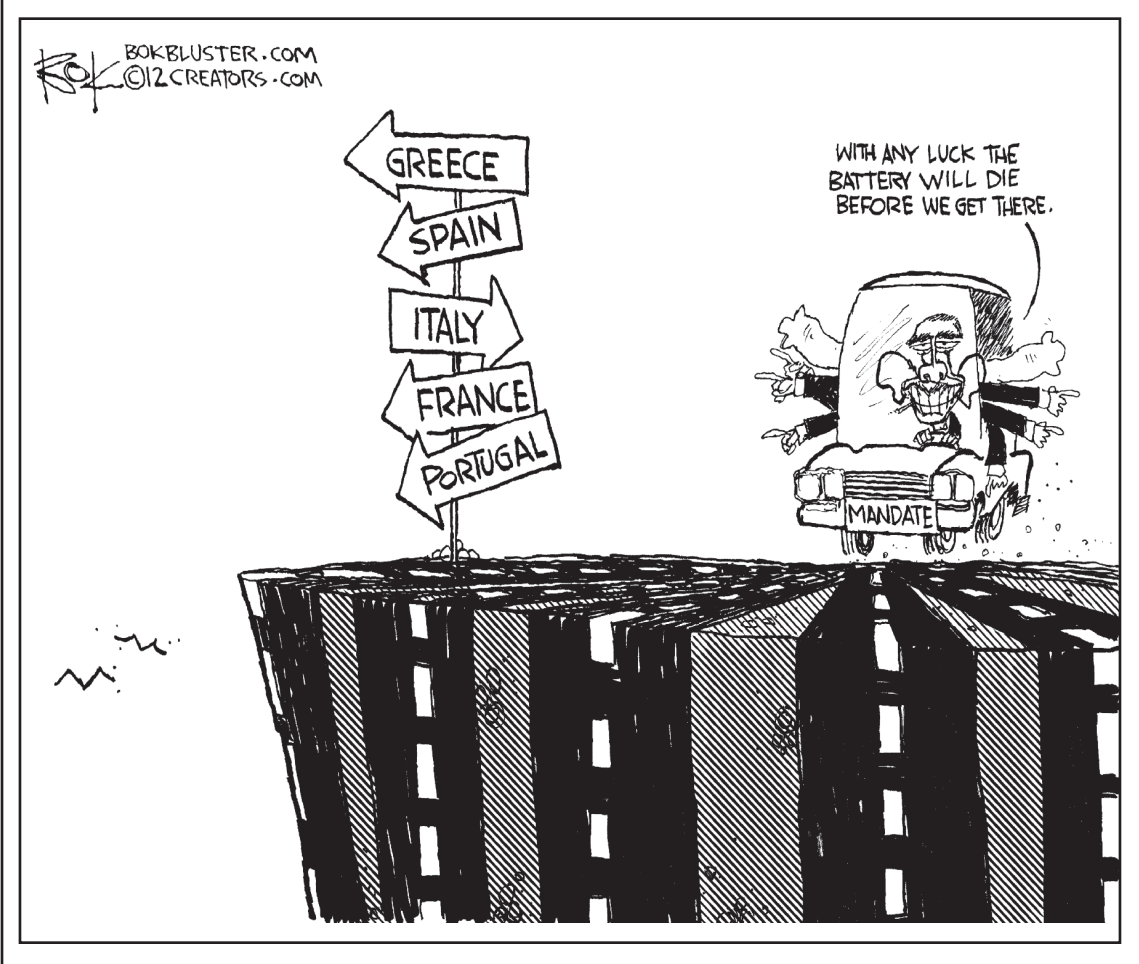

The Romney diehards no doubt can be counted among Republican voters willing to see House Speaker John Boehner lead their party over the fiscal cliff to protect the Bush tax cuts for the richest 2 percent of Americans. It seems, however, a particularly bad time to be manning the barricades while Republican leaders simultaneously talk of reforming Medicare, Social Security and other aspects of the social safety net.

As the GOP licks its wounds over the defeat of Romney and falls back on a slightly weakened congressional leadership, with no towering figure yet apparent to lead it from the wilderness, untimely and pointless talk about 2016 is already being heard. The party will be much better served by quiet intramural discussions about how to shake off its politics of exclusion and obstruction, starting with true compromise on avoiding the fiscal cliff, and the blame if it's not done.

The notion of class warfare between the parties has always been a divisive enterprise, from the New Deal of the 1930s through the Reagan era, when government was cast as the problem rather than the solution in meeting America's economic woes. Enough already. It's time for a cease fire.

Isn't it time Americans got to know each other?

The late Tom Pettit, who covered American politics so well for NBC News from John Kennedy in 1960 to Bill Clinton in 1992, was missed even more during this year's uninspiring presidential campaign. My personal favorite Tom Pettit professional moment was when he was interviewing Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz, who served in the Cabinets of both Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford.

Secretary Butz, an unrelenting critic of the food stamps program then under his department, unloaded on the "greedy" exploiters of food stamps he and his people were chasing down. Pettit asked Butz if he knew anyone who had used food stamps. Butz spoke about how he was no stranger to supermarkets, that he accompanied his wife on the grocery shopping and that he had personally seen people at the checkout counter paying with food stamps.

Pettit pressed Butz: Did the secretary know anyone — personally — who depended upon food stamps to feed her children? After an extended silence, the obviously displeased agriculture secretary answered the question, "No." The only thing that followed was the close: "Tom Pettit, NBC News, Washington."

This anecdote reminds me why the military draft between 1940 and 1973 educated so many of us about what it meant to be an American and, more importantly, tells me why in the second decade of the 21st century the United States desperately needs every 18-year-old American to give two years of national service, military or civilian, to their country.

First, a personal note: At Parris Island, S.C., in Marine Corps boot camp, for the first time in my life I slept in the same quarters with African-Americans and took orders, as a matter of course, from African-Americans. In that boot camp platoon, there were six college graduates, four young men who, given the option by juvenile courts, had chosen to enlist rather than have the judge impose a sentence and one of us, who proved to be both a gentle giant and a superb rifleman, who had never gone beyond the eighth grade.

We were mostly Catholics from the North or Baptists from the South. But we also included four Jewish Marines and even a couple of, to the manor born, Episcopalians. After the longest 13 weeks of our lives, we all came to know that while our ancestors may have come to America at different times and in different ships, now we were all in the same boat — and that each of us was an American.

The draft — when three out of four male college graduates as well as high-school graduates served — guaranteed that Americans of all classes, all social strata and all areas of the country would shoulder the responsibility of defending their nation. And that in doing so they would rub shoulders with and — while sharing bunks, a weekend pass and, sometimes, even foxholes — get to know, and to depend upon, other Americans very different from themselves.

Which brings us back to a variation of Tom Pettit's great question of Earl Butz: Do you, Mr. Commentator, or do you, Madame Senator, PERSONALLY know anyone whom your arguments or your votes have sent into combat? Have you attended the funeral of anyone whom you PERSONALLY knew who was killed in Iraq or Afghanistan?

A "Support Our Troops" decal on your SUV or a flag pin in your lapel does not qualify. The American Establishment — political, economic, academic and journalistic — has next to no personal stake in men and women who risk their life and limbs to defend the United States. Our military is increasingly integrated by race and increasingly segregated by class.

Tragically, most Americans today only know people exactly like themselves. Universal national service would introduce Americans to each other and to what it means to be a citizen.

The Cullman (Ala.) Times on wasted time in Washington:

While the United States teeters on the financial cliff, more attention is being given to the lurid extramarital affairs of military and government leaders than the more pressing problems facing the nation.

Sure, there is concern that David Petraeus, as director of the Central Intelligence Agency, may have dropped a few secrets during his affair with the woman who penned his biography. And Brig. Gen. Jeffrey Sinclair's wife, Rebecca, has appeared on a television show to bemoan the Army life that leads husbands and wives to have affairs.

There's also the case of Gen. John Allen, who some officials accuse of sending suggestive emails to a Florida woman.

OK, we get it. The scum rises regularly in society. Men and women cheat, but other than those who are involved in these tangled affairs does anyone really care to know the details or care to listen to the shameless characters blabber about their shortcomings?

The American obsession with pitiful personal details is becoming absurd. Let's move a little closer to the fiscal cliff and focus on what economists warn could be an economic catastrophe at the turn of the year. ...

Vast amounts of time are wasted in Washington and by the media on learning the details of personal failures of high-profile characters. Once the garbage is spilled, not much of it has any real consequence concerning national security, and certainly no bearing on the state of the economy.

Congressional leaders have enjoyed plenty of recreation with the presidential election and all the trimmings that go with a year of campaigning. It's time now to turn away from the trappings of sensational stories and focus on the future of the country.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A team of former NASA executives is launching a private venture to send people to the moon for a price that is definitely out of this world.

For $1.5 billion, the newly formed business is offering countries a two-person trip to the moon, either for research or national prestige. The venture was announced Wednesday.

NASA's last trip to the moon was 40 years ago. The United States was the only country that landed people there, beating the Soviet Union in a space race to the moon that transfixed the world. But once the race ended, there has been only sporadic interest in the moon. President Barack Obama cancelled NASA's planned return to the moon, saying America had already been there.

But the firm has talked to other countries, which are showing interest in going, said former NASA associate administrator Alan Stern, who is president of the new Golden Spike Company. Stern said he's looking at countries like South Africa, South Korea, and Japan.

"It's not about being first. It's about joining the club," Stern said. "We're kind of cleaning up what NASA did in the 1960s. We're going to make a commodity of it in the 2020s."

Stern said he's aiming for a first launch before the end of the decade and then up 15 or 20 launches total.

Dozens of private space companies have started up recently, but few if any will make it — just like in other fields — said Harvard astronomer Jonathan McDowell, who tracks launches worldwide.

Many of those companies hope to follow the success of Space X, which has ferried cargo to the International Space Station for NASA. But more than 90 percent of new ventures will fail before anything is built, he said.

"This is unlikely to be the one that will pan out," McDowell said.

Even though many countries ponied up millions of dollars to fly their astronauts about the Russian space station Mir and the American space shuttles in the 1990s, a billion dollar price tag seems a bit steep, he said.

The latest company is full of space veterans; American University space policy professor Howard McCurdy called them "heavy hitters" in the field. The board chairman is Apollo era flight director Gerry Griffin, who once headed the Johnson Space Center. Advisors include space shuttle veterans, Hollywood directors, former House Speaker Newt Gingrich, former U.N. Ambassador Bill Richardson and engineer-author Homer Hickam.

Stern says the company will buy existing rockets and capsules, only needing to develop new spacesuits and a lunar lander.

WASHINGTON (AP) — New Jersey Republican Gov. Chris Christie reunited with President Barack Obama on Thursday for the first time since the pair teamed up in response to Superstorm Sandy.

Christie made an unannounced visit to the White House, where he met with Obama to press for $83 billion in extra disaster aid for his state plus New York and Connecticut.

Obama is expected to ask Congress for about $50 billion in additional emergency aid for 11 states struck by the late October storm.

Christie made a similar pitch to a fellow Republican, House Speaker John Boehner of Ohio, later at the Capitol. He also met with Sen. Mary Landrieu, D-La., who chairs the appropriations subcommittee on homeland security, which oversees aid. New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo and New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg have made similar trips to Washington recently to press for federal money.

Christie wouldn't talk to reporters about his meeting with the president.

The New Jersey governor could seek the presidency himself in 2016. His warm praise of Obama's handling of the storm just days before the election in November drew fire some fellow Republicans. But the fast friendship Christie and Obama formed as they toured the devastation from Sandy in the final days before the presidential election could pay dividends for a governor eager to rebuild his state and in need of federal dollars.

Christie dodged questions from the throng of reporters who trailed him through the corridors of the Capitol. He ran into Sen. Scott Brown, a Massachusetts Republican who lost in November, in a Senate hallway. The pair embraced and Christie promised to call Brown.

Christie's White House visit even sparked speculation he might be carrying a private message from the president to Boehner. Obama and the speaker talked by telephone Wednesday about averting the so-called fiscal cliff, a combination of automatic tax increases and spending cuts set to begin in January. A Boehner spokesman declined to say what the speaker and Christie talked about.

"Going home, guys," Christie said after emerging from his Boehner meeting, his final stop of the day on Capitol Hill. "I'm not talking, guys."

Then he headed to a taping of Comedy Central's "The Daily Show" with Jon Stewart set to air Thursday night.

Christie's pitch on federal aid was echoed by other officials at a Senate panel hearing Thursday.

Trains, tracks, tunnels, bridges, roads, rail stations and airports damaged from Superstorm Sandy will cost billions of dollars to repair, and even more to make them resilient enough to prevent similar devastation from future storms, lawmakers and transportation officials from New York and New Jersey told the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee's transportation subcommittee .

Transportation infrastructure in New York suffered $7.5 billion in damage, said Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y. The New York Metropolitan Transportation Authority, which operates the city's subway system, pegged its damages at $5 billion.

Pearl Harbor survivor helps identify unknown dead

HONOLULU (AP) — Ray Emory could not accept that more than one quarter of the 2,400 Americans who died at Pearl Harbor were buried, unidentified, in a volcanic crater.

And so he set out to restore names to the dead.

Emory, a survivor of the attack, doggedly scoured decades-old documents to piece together who was who. He pushed, and sometimes badgered, the government into relabeling more than 300 gravestones with the ship names of the deceased. And he lobbied for forensic scientists to exhume the skeletons of those who might be identified.

On Friday, the 71-year anniversary of the Japanese attack, the Navy and National Park Service will honor the 91-year-old former sailor for his determination to have Pearl Harbor remembered, and remembered accurately.

“Some of the time, we suffered criticism from Ray and sometimes it was personally directed at me. And I think it was all for the better,” said National Park Service historian Daniel Martinez. “It made us rethink things. It wasn’t viewed by me as personal, but a reminder of how you need to sharpen your pencil when you recall these events and the people and what’s important.”

Emory first learned of the unknown graves more than 20 years ago when he visited the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific shortly before the 50th anniversary of the attack. The grounds foreman told him the Pearl Harbor dead were scattered around the veterans’ graveyard in a volcanic crater called Punchbowl after its resemblance to the serving dish.

Emory got a clipboard and walked along row after row of flat granite markers, making notes of any listing death around Dec. 7, 1941. He got ahold of the Navy’s burial records from archives in Washington and determined which ships the dead in each grave were from.

He wrote the government asking why the markers didn’t note ship names and asked them to change it.

“They politely told me to go you-know-where,” Emory told The Associated Press in an interview at his Honolulu home, where he keeps a “war room” packed with documents, charts and maps. Military and veterans policy called for changing grave markers only if remains are identified, an inscription is mistaken or a marker is damaged.

Emory appealed to the late Patsy Mink, a Hawaii congresswoman who inserted a provision in an appropriations bill requiring Veterans Affairs to include “USS Arizona” on gravestones of unknowns from that battle-ship.

Today, unknowns from other vessels like the USS Oklahoma and USS West Virginia, also have new markers.

Some of the dead, like those turned to ash, will likely never be identified. But Emory knew some could be.

The Navy’s 1941 burial records noted one body, burned and floating in the harbor, was found wearing shorts with the name “Livingston.” Only two men named Livingston were assigned to Pearl Harbor at the time, and one of the two was accounted for. Emory suspected the body was the other Livingston.

Government forensic scientists exhumed him. Dental records, a skeletal analysis and circumstantial evidence confirmed Emory’s suspicions. The remains belonged to Alfred Livingston, a 23-year-old fireman first class assigned to the USS Oklahoma.

Livingston’s nephew, Ken Livingston, said his uncle and his father were raised together by their grandmother and attended the same one-room schoolhouse. They grew up working on farms in and around Worthington, Ind. Livingston remembers his dad saying the brothers took turns wearing a pair of shoes they shared.

When the family learned Alfred was found, they brought him home from Hawaii to be buried in the same cemetery where his grandmother and mother rest.

About a third of the town showed up for his 2007 memorial service in Worthington, a town of just 1,400 about 80 miles southwest of Indianapolis. The local American Legion put up a sign welcoming home “Worthington’s missing son.”

“It brought a lot of closure,” said Ken Livingston, 62, his voice cracking.

John Lewis, a retired Navy captain who worked with Emory while assigned to the Joint POW/MIA Accounting Command between 2001 and 2004, said the command is fortunate someone like Emory has the time and initiative to painstakingly connect the dots on the unknowns.

“Without Ray Emory I don’t know if this ever would have been done,” Lewis said from Flowood, Miss.

Grinch will appear at Salem First Friends Church
The grinch is at the Salem First Friends Church on Jennings Avenue and is practicing for the production of "How the Grinch Almost Stole Christmas." The Quaker Bells along with the Adult Choir, Hearts2Jesus choir, drama team, and instruments will present the program at 7 p.m. Sunday. The "Elegance String Quartet" will perform starting at 6:30 p.m. while refreshments are served. The public is invited to the free presentation. (Submitted photo)

Way Station asks for help assisting families

COLUMBIANA — The Christmas season is the busiest season for The Way Station.

Even more children than last year’s total of 250 will be helped through programs in Columbiana and East Liverpool.

There are 130 children signed up for the Adopt-A-Family program and more calling daily needing help for the holiday.

“Last year in Columbiana alone, we helped 81 last minute children who did not make it to our Adopt-A-Family sign-ups,” said Direct assistance director Carla Sukosd.

The faith-based non-profit ministry is helping children between the ages of 0-18, as long as they are still students. “Our biggest need is for teens,” said Sukosd. “People love to buy toys for the younger children and there is need there, of course. But we are always in need of gifts for older children. Gift cards for Old Navy, Kohl’s, Target and Wal-mart are a huge help.”

Another need is for turkeys, hams or gift certificates for grocery stores. Both the Columbiana and the East Liverpool Way Station sites will have their monthly food distributions early for the holiday. The gift certificates are helpful because of lack of freezer space.

Those wishing to help may drop off any new toys, between 9 a.m.-4 p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays or Wednesdays between 9 a.m.-8 p.m. at 769 Springfield Road, Columbiana.

All donations for the Christmas Programs including the food distribution should be there no later than Friday, Dec. 14. Toys and other new items must be earmarked for Christmas Programs or you may ask for Carla or Kelly or call 330-482-5072 for additional information.

Judge denies new trial in Amish hair attacks

TOLEDO (AP) — A federal judge on Thursday denied a request for a new trial made by the leader of an Amish group and some of his followers convicted in hair-cutting attacks on members of their own faith.

U.S. District Judge Dan Polster also declined to overturn the convictions of Samuel Mullet Sr. and his followers who joined his request, most of those who were convicted.

Sixteen Amish men and women were convicted in September of hate crimes for a series of hair- and beard-cutting attacks that stemmed from a religious dispute that terrorized the normally peaceful religious settlement in eastern Ohio.

The five attacks just over a year ago were an attempt to shame mainstream members who Mullet believed were straying from their beliefs, prosecutors said.

Mullet’s defense attorney, Ed Bryan, argued that the prosecution presented no evidence that Mullet participated in the attacks and that merely knowing about the plans should not be enough for a conviction.

The judge rejected that argument, saying it was clear Mullet had a role in what happened even though he wasn’t accused of cutting anyone’s hair.

“There was substantial evidence that Samuel Mullet Sr. did more than tacitly approve of the attacks,” Polster wrote.

Bryan also argued that allowing Mullet’s daughter-in-law to testify about her sexual relationship with Mullet tainted the jury and should not have been permitted because it did not have anything to do with the hair cuttings.

Bryan said he was disappointed by the judge’s decision Thursday and that he plans to appeal.

“I think we made a pretty compelling case,” he said. “I still believe evidence presented at trial was insufficient.”

During the trial, witnesses described how sons pulled their father out of bed and chopped off his beard in the moonlight and how women surrounded their mother-in-law and cut off two feet of her hair, taking it down to the scalp in some places.

Prosecutors said the attackers targeted hair because it carries spiritual significance in the Amish faith.

Mullet’s request for acquittal or a new trial also said the judge should not have allowed an Associated Press article from an October 2011 interview of Mullet to be used as evidence and that prosecutors took Mullet’s statements in the article out of context, the judge wrote. The judge responded by saying that Mullet never disputed the accuracy of the article and that Mullet could have testified to clarify what he meant.

Wells Fargo boss talks bank fees, economy

John Stumpf is a survivor. The Wells Fargo CEO kept his job as peers fell after the 2008 financial crisis, expanded his company while others shrank theirs and is a personable banker at a time of great anger toward his industry.

In a wide-ranging Q&A with The Associated Press, Stumpf sounds off about the economy, bank fees and tax policy.

He says the economy needs "more planning and more leadership."

ECB cuts growth outlook for eurozone

The European Central Bank warned of another gloomy year for the 17 European Union countries that use the euro, cutting its forecast for economic growth in 2013 from plus 0.5 percent to minus 0.3 percent.

Even so, the bank left rates unchanged at its meeting Thursday, and ECB head Mario Draghi gave little sign he was leaning toward any more cuts to stimulate growth.

The ECB's revised forecasts come as the eurozone's economy is caught in a recession.

US jobless aid applications drop to 370K

The number of people seeking U.S. unemployment aid fell sharply last week as a temporary spike caused by Superstorm Sandy faded. Weekly applications have fallen back to a level consistent with modest hiring.

The Labor Department said Thursday that applications dropped 25,000 last week to a seasonally adjusted 370,000.

Unemployment aid applications spiked a month ago after Sandy shuttered businesses in the Northeast. Applications jumped to 451,000 in the week ended Nov. 10. People can claim unemployment benefits if their workplaces are forced to close and they aren't paid.

Starbucks promises to pay more UK tax

Starbucks has bowed to mounting pressure over its tax affairs in Britain, with plans to pay about $16 million in each of the next two years.

Having been slammed by the country's lawmakers for "immorally" avoiding tax, Starbucks' U.K. managing director Kris Engskog said the firm had agreed to pay more than required by law.

The Seattle-based coffee company has 700 British outlets, but has paid just $13.8 million in corporation tax in 14 years. Starbucks Corp. says this is due to a process involving paying royalties to its European headquarters in the Netherlands.

The company hasn't done anything illegal. Companies operating in Europe can base themselves in any of the 27 European Union nations, allowing them to take advantage of a particular country's low tax rates.

McAfee denied asylum; expected in Belize

Software company founder John McAfee was hospitalized after being denied political asylum in Guatemala, and his lawyers said they were making a last-ditch effort to keep him from being flown back to Belize for questioning about the killing of a fellow American expatriate.

McAfee told The Associated Press that he had suffered chest pains overnight but didn't believe he had suffered a heart attack. A government doctor who examined him agreed.

McAfee was moved from an immigration center to a police-run hospital after Guatemalan authorities said McAfee's request for asylum had been denied. They did not explain why. Shortly after the decision was announced, McAfee issued a plea on his blog for the public to petition Guatemalan President Otto Perez Molina to let him stay.

T-Mobile to get Apple devices soon

T-Mobile will likely start carrying the iPhone next year after its parent company, Deutsche Telekom, said it has reached a new deal with Apple.

T-Mobile USA had been the lone iPhone-less carrier among the four national wireless companies in the U.S. Although it has been possible to use iPhones on T-Mobile networks, customers had to provide the phones themselves. The phones also work at much slower speeds, though T-Mobile has been reshuffling its network to match or exceed AT&T's data speeds. The three larger carriers, AT&T Inc., Verizon Wireless and Sprint Nextel Corp., already sell the iPhone, as do many smaller ones.

New Fantasyland officially opens in Orlando

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Derrick Weitlich and his friend Leslie Martinez arrived at the Magic Kingdom at 5:40 a.m. Thursday, wanting to be among the first to visit the park's new Fantasyland.

Getting up early was worth it, said these Melbourne, Fla., Disney fans, who estimated that they have visited the park some 180 times. "I love Beauty and the Beast," said Martinez, while standing in front of the new Gaston's Tavern restaurant. "And I'm very picky when it comes to details about Beauty and the Beast."

Martinez and Weitlich weren't disappointed. From the antlers lining the walls in the tavern to the animatronic Ariel in the Under the Sea-Journey of the Little Mermaid ride, they were impressed with the New Fantasyland.

It's the largest expansion project in the park's 41-year history. The new spaces are built on what was once the site of the 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea experience, and the expansion doubles the size of the original Fantasyland. The central Florida theme park near Orlando is blending classic Disney characters (like Dumbo, the flying elephant) and newer, popular hits (like "The Little Mermaid") with the multimillion dollar expansion.

Michigan GOP pushes right to work

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Republicans rushed right-to-work legislation Thursday in the Michigan Legislature, drawing raucous protests from hundreds of union supporters, some of whom were pepper-sprayed by police when they tried to storm the Senate chamber.

The House voted 58-52 to approve a measure prohibiting private unions from requiring that nonunion employees pay fees. The Senate was debating a similar bill, with Democrats denouncing it as an attack on worker rights and the GOP sponsor insisting it would boost the economy and jobs. Separate legislation dealing with public-sector unions was expected to come later.

Because of rules requiring a five-day delay between votes in the two chambers on the same legislation, final enactment appears unlikely until next week. Republican Gov. Rick Snyder, who previously had said repeatedly that right-to-work was "not on my agenda," told reporters Thursday he would sign the measures.

A victory in Michigan would give the right-to-work movement its strongest foothold yet in the Rust Belt region, where organized labor already has suffered several body blows. Republicans in Indiana and Wisconsin recently pushed through legislation curbing union rights, sparking massive protests.

Apple to produce line of Macs in the US next year

NEW YORK (AP) — Apple CEO Tim Cook says the company will move production of one of its existing lines of Mac computers to the United States next year.

Industry watchers said the announcement is both a cunning public-relations move and a harbinger of more manufacturing jobs moving back to the U.S. as wages rise in China.

Cook made the comments in part of an interview taped for NBC's "Rock Center," but aired Thursday morning on "Today" and posted on the network's website.

In a separate interview with Bloomberg Businessweek, he said that the company will spend $100 million in 2013 to move production of the line to the U.S. from China.

"This doesn't mean that Apple will do it ourselves, but we'll be working with people and we'll be investing our money," Cook told Bloomberg.

That suggests the company could be helping one of its Taiwanese manufacturing partners, which run factories in China, to set up production lines in the U.S. devoted to Apple products. Research firm IHS iSuppli noted that both Foxconn Technology Group, which assembles iPhones, and Quanta Computer Inc., which does the same for MacBooks, already have small operations in the U.S.

Apple representatives had no comment Thursday beyond Cook's remarks.

Like most consumer electronics companies, Apple forges agreements with contract manufacturers to assemble its products overseas. However, the assembly accounts for a fraction of the cost of making a PC or smartphone. Most of the cost lies in buying chips, and many of those are made in the U.S., Cook noted in his interview with NBC.

The company and Foxconn have faced significant criticism this year over working conditions at the Chinese facilities where Apple products are assembled. The attention prompted Foxconn to raise salaries.

Cook didn't say which line of computers would be produced in the U.S. or where in the country they would be made. But he told Bloomberg that the production would include more than just final assembly. That suggests that machining of cases and printing of circuit boards could take place in the U.S.

The simplest Macs to assemble are the Mac Pro and Mac Mini desktop computers. Since they lack the built-in screens of the MacBooks and iMacs, they would likely be easier to separate from the Asian display supply chain.

Analyst Jeffrey Wu at IHS iSuppli said it's not uncommon for PC makers to build their bulkier products close to their customers to cut down on delivery times and shipping costs.

Regardless, the U.S. manufacturing line is expected to represent just a tiny piece of Apple's overall production, with sales of iPhones and iPads now dwarfing those of its computers.

Apple is latching on to a trend that could see many jobs move back to the U.S., said Hal Sirkin, a partner with The Boston Consulting Group. He noted that Lenovo Group, the Chinese company that's neck-and-neck with Hewlett-Packard Co. for the title of world's largest PC maker, announced in October that it will start making PCs and tablets in the U.S.

Chinese wages are raising 15 to 20 percent per year, Sirkin said. U.S. wages are rising much more slowly, and the country is a cheap place to hire compared to other developed countries like Germany, France and Japan, he said.

HOROSCOPE

By HOLIDAY MATHIS
12/7/12

Love and the Libra Moon

The Libra moon points out that the obvious things you do for love are only the tip of the iceberg. As it is with icebergs, about 80 percent of the mass lies unseen below the water. In love, this percentage may include ideological adjustments, practical preparations, ego death and personal sacrifice. But relationships are usually worth the effort.

ARIES (March 21-April 19).

You will receive something different from what you gave, but the two things are of equal value. This may not be readily apparent, but time will reveal the balance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20).

Spontaneous conversations erupt between strangers. There's an overriding sense that we're all in this together, so you may as well get to know that person standing next to you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21).

Your intellectual energy continues to be strong. Interesting comments, headlines and ideas will spur your curiosity. Only the best and brightest will be able to keep up with you.

CANCER (June 22-July 22).

You like to remain as independent as possible, but you'll make exceptions to that rule now. Letting others take care of you will place a lovely softness in your heart.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22).

The rubber-band aspect of a certain relationship will be activated. You'll pull apart from someone and then snip back together with an equal and opposite force.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22).

Detours are often more rewarding paths than the original road, but because they are lesser known routes, they cause apprehension. Today it's safe to follow those detour signs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23).

With the moon in your sign, there's a surge of excitement around you. Whether or not you want the attention, it will be yours. You can either deflect it or use it to your advantage.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21).

Things are humming along, so keep your life in motion. Relax and let the wheels turn. If you throw on the brakes at any point, it will be hard to get back to your current momentum.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21).

Your creative expressions have wings. Don't be afraid to give small doses of your work away for free. People will love your contribution enough to pay for a larger dose.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19).

You will be even more sensitive than usual to the subtleties of human interaction. Loved ones will tell you exactly what they need and want. All you have to do is pay attention.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18).

You'll be caught between warring factions. Good news: You don't have to take sides. Unless you feel the need to protect one party, it would be better not to get involved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20).

It may feel as though your professional life is playing teeter-totter with your personal life. But one doesn't have to be down for the other to be up. The answer is to get off this ride and play another game.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Dec. 7).

You work to steel your self-discipline. This effort is well worth your while, because once you take command over your inner voice, the outside world will echo it. You'll climb to the next level at work in January. In February, you'll be put on the spot, and you'll win a prize. March brings new relationships. Pisces and Gemini people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 3, 10, 23, 19 and 30.

WEEKEND LOVE FORECAST: ARIES:

Bold moves may feel fake to you, but not to the others who watch you make them. TAURUS: Admitting your mistakes is a sign of strength, but not if you do it too often. GEMINI: The limits you set for yourself keep you healthy, wealthy and attractive.

CANCER: If you say the wrong thing, don't worry. Every day is a chance to reinvent yourself in the eyes of a loved one. LEO: Regarding your relationship, you may have the distinct impression that the other person is getting the sweeter end of the deal. VIRGO: Your efforts will pay off. All is orchestrated to play like a marvelous song. LIBRA: High expectations can ruin a date.

Keep things low-key, and you'll be surprised at how well it all works out. SCORPIO: You may come off as easy-going, but when you want someone, no one can keep you away. SAGITTARIUS: When you put your mind to it, you'll take action, make a change happen and enjoy the result you deserve.

CAPRICORN: Friends have bad ideas about your love life. Follow your heart instead. AQUARIUS: You'll love the flirty attention coming your way. PISCES: Success in your professional life gives you the confidence to create the same dynamic in your personal life.

Travel package plan

Heloise

Dear Readers: A lot of people travel for the holidays and bring gifts and food with them. Here are just a couple of friendly reminders about FLYING WITH WRAPPED PACKAGES, from the Transportation Security Administration:

When it comes to food, the same rules apply as the rules for liquids. If it's more than 3.4 ounces, it needs to be put in checked baggage or shipped ahead of time. This includes jams, creamy dips, sauces, etc.

Wrapped gifts are allowed in your checked baggage, but realize that if your bag is searched, TSA officers may and are allowed to unwrap the package. Plan to wrap gifts upon arrival, or ship them ahead of time.

I hope these hints come in handy, and I wish everyone safe travel this holiday season! — Heloise

P.S.: Please don't fuss at TSA officers if your family's favorite homemade salad dressing must be confiscated from your carry-on bag.

COMPUTER RECYCLE BIN

Dear Readers: Did you know that when you delete a file on the computer, it may not automatically delete? It is temporarily moved to the computer's recycle or trash bin. This is so you can recover a file that might have been accidentally deleted. Here are some hints about a computer's recycle bin:

— To recover files from the recycle bin, double-click on the recycle-bin icon. Find the file you are looking for. Right-click on the file and select "Restore."

— To permanently delete files from the recycle bin, first open it. There will be an option on the toolbar to "Empty the Recycle Bin." Select this option, and all files will be permanently deleted. (Be sure to look over the files first and make sure there is nothing worth saving.) — Heloise

SPONGE SUPPORT

Dear Heloise: I purchased a wrist support to help when using my computer mouse. It wasn't much good for its intended use — my wrist kept slipping off. I returned it and noticed a carwash sponge at the same store for $1. The sponge is about 6 inches by 9 inches and is covered with a very soft and fluffy woollike fabric. It works great! — Doug in Louisiana

DIAPER-PAIL REDO

Dear Heloise: I repurposed my 4-year-old grandson's diaper pail. He and his mom live with us, and the bathroom they share was always littered with his tub toys. I got some decals from the hardware store and decorated the white-lidded pail with ocean creatures. It has a pop-up lid, and when the bath ends, he shoots the toys into the pail like basketballs. The toys can drain and be ready for the next oceanic adventure. — Deb in Indiana

Treat retired teacher like free baby-sitter

DEAR ABBY: I never had a desire to have kids. I married a man, "Harry," who had four, and did my duty being with them on holidays, birthdays and vacations. I never enjoyed it, and I have always been honest regarding my feelings about baby-sitting.

Now that Harry's children are grown and have children of their own, they think my husband and I should give up our weekends and holidays to baby-sit their children. Harry and I have had several serious arguments about this.

I have told his kids I do not want to watch their children. Harry will tell me at the last minute that one of them is being dropped off because the father and his girlfriend are going out. When the grandchild arrives, Harry disappears because he doesn't want to be bothered. I served my time when my stepchildren were small and have looked forward to the day I'd no longer have to share my down time with kids.

Three months ago I was "surprised" with the 7-year-old so her dad and his honey could go to Atlantic City for a great time. I told them I had a political function to attend at 1:30 the next day; they didn't return until 3:30 in the afternoon. My husband thought it was fine to go without me! I would never have done that.

I love Harry, but this is causing me major grief. Please tell me what you think about this. Oh — and did I mention they think because I was an elementary school teacher I should WANT to sit and play with their kids? It's comparing apples to oranges. — NEARING WITS' END IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR NEARING WITS' END: What I think is that you are being taken advantage of, and it will continue as long as you allow it, however unwillingly. The next time Harry informs you at the last minute that a grandchild is being dropped off, grab your coat and purse and tell him you are going shopping, visiting a friend, seeing a movie or anything else that will get you out of the house. If you do, perhaps the next time his kids need a baby sitter he will suggest that they hire one.

Oh, and did I mention that when you were a teacher, you were COMPENSATED for your labor? You are being used, and I hope you draw the line before you really arrive at wits' end.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 70-year-old man. Many people tell me I look much younger because I have my hair colored professionally.

I started dyeing my hair about 16 years ago because my children are much younger than those of most people my age. They wanted me to color my hair so that I didn't look like their friends' grandparents.

Now friends and new acquaintances make comments about me not having any gray hair at my age. So, what do I say? Should I tell them that I have my hair colored? Should I just laugh? Please advise. — TO DYE OR NOT TO DYE

DEAR T.D.O.N.T.D.: Many men have their hair professionally colored these days and others do it themselves at home. It is nothing to be ashamed of. You neither have to laugh nor to divulge the secret of your eternal youth. However, since you are beginning to feel self-conscious because you feel the color of your hair isn't age-appropriate, discuss it with your colorist. It may be time to let a little bit of gray come through at the temples.

Stopping GERD symptoms not enough

phenytoin (Dilantin), and I have a balance problem: My fear is that I could fall and break a bone.

I started using aloe extract. I take it twice daily, and it works great. I have had no problems with my GERD since I started taking the aloe. I told my doctor about this, and he did not seem too happy with me for stopping the omeprazole. I would appreciate your opinion about this problem. — R.G.

ANSWER: GERD, gastroesophageal reflux disease, is a condition in which stomach acid goes up into the esophagus, the muscular tube that carries food from the mouth to the stomach. Acid doesn't belong in the esophagus, so it can cause sensations of burning, or can bring about a cough in some people. Many people have no symptoms.

A few people, after years of acid going up into the esophagus, will develop Barrett's esophagus — the lining of the esophagus starts to look like stomach lining. This puts the esophagus at higher risk of developing adenocarcinoma, a type of cancer. Researchers believe, but haven't proven, that reducing the acid in the esophagus can prevent cancer. Studies have proven that the abnormal lining of the esophagus can start to return to normal with high doses of medicines like omeprazole, so it makes sense that omeprazole can prevent cancer in those cases. Unfortunately, stopping symptoms doesn't always mean that the lining is returning to normal. Even though the aloe may be helping your symptoms, there is no guarantee that it is helping to stop the Barrett's esophagus and protect you against esophageal cancer. I suspect that is why your physician seemed unhappy.

You are quite right that both phenytoin and omeprazole can affect the bones and make them more likely to fracture. But I would recommend asking your physician to test your bones for fracture risk before you stop these medicines, since they are both doing very important jobs.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE AND ROACH: Can you please address Moyamoya disease? My husband's cousin was recently diagnosed with it following a stroke and is undergoing surgery. We heard that there may be a genetic component to the disease through the mother. Is this true? What are the cousin's chances for a full recovery? — K.O.C.

ANSWER: Moyamoya disease, despite its odd-sounding name (Japanese for "puff of smoke"), is a serious disease involving blockages of the major blood vessels in the base of the brain, called the circle of Willis. It is most prevalent in Japan but is rarely found in this country. Only about 10 percent of Moyamoya is familial, and the genetics are not related to gender, even though the condition is a bit more common in women. Surgical treatment for this condition is designed to increase blood flow to the affected part of the brain. In expert hands, the results can be very good. This is one of the conditions for which it pays to consult with the person with the greatest experience you can find.

READERS: The booklet on stroke explains a condition that is deservedly feared by all. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue — No. 902, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Can. with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

He thinks nothing wrong with flirting his male friends. Shortly after, he asked for a divorce out of the blue, saying I criticized him too much.

I snooped on his computer and found the photo along with other highly flirtatious emails, one of them arranging to meet this woman during the day. Both of them made excuses, telling her boyfriend and our mutual friends that they had accidentally bumped into each other. Shortly after that, she broke up with her boyfriend while he was undergoing chemotherapy.

I never told my husband that I knew about their flirtation, as I wanted to see where it was headed. When my husband said maybe we should work on our marriage, we went for couples counseling. That's when I brought it up, showing the counselor all of the photographs and emails I found.

My husband says he did nothing wrong, that I ruined a good friendship, and that he feels "violated" because

Toys For Tots boxes available

Placed at 25 locations throughout county

The Toys for Tots program has donation boxes set up in over 25 locations, throughout Columbiana County.

A local distribution point has been donated by the Whitehill Family. Any questions about the program can be directed to the local contact, Wayne Hays at Phantom Auto Works, Broadway Ave in Salem, which is also a drop-off point or by calling 330-277-1003.

Toys for Tots, in conjunction with the US Marine Corp., has been collecting and distributing toys since 1947.

The local locations for drop offs are: Huntington Banks (Salem, Salem Giant Eagle, Washingtonville, Columbiana, Lisbon and E. Palestine), Farmers National Bank (Salem, Leetonia, Damascus), J.C. Penneys (Calcutta), Big Lots (Calcutta) Dunkin' Donuts (east and west locations, Salem), Check into Cash (Calcutta), Whispering Pines (Columbiana), Lyle Printing/Farm and Dairy (Salem), Dollar General Stores (Salem and east Salem) and Giant Eagle (Salem).

The boxes will be picked up Dec. 19. Donations must be made by that date.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — If Manti Te'o's career at Notre Dame has seemed like something straight out of a Hollywood script, perhaps it is fitting the linebacker is cast as an underdog in the final two scenes of his collegiate career.

Gordon shines for Browns

Rookie receiver coming through as playmaker

BEREA (AP) — Josh Gordon arrived at training camp out of shape, unfamiliar with the Browns' playbook and saddled with personal baggage from a troubled college career. Another lost rookie, Gordon was way behind. He's caught up. "He's our top receiver right now," linebacker D'Qwell Jackson said. With a long, elegant stride and deceiving speed, the 21-year-old Gordon has emerged as Cleveland's biggest deep threat, perhaps the club's best playmaker and maybe the end of the Browns' search for a bonafide No. 1 wide receiver, something they haven't had in years. Gordon, blessed with enormous talent, is the whole package. "He's big and he's fast and he can catch," said Browns coach Pat Shurmur. Gordon had the best game of his brief career last Sunday, catching six passes for

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers aren't taking any chances with their franchise quarterback's sprained right shoulder and dislocated rib. Though the Steelers confirmed Ben Roethlisberger will return to the starting lineup on Sunday against San Diego after missing three weeks due to injury, Roethlisberger will take the field with a little extra protection. Roethlisberger will play with a custom fit rib/chest compression shirt and a layer of Kevlar-lined composite in his shoulder pads to help absorb hits to his clavicle and shoulder joint regions. The padding, made by Unequal Technologies, has grown popular across the

NFL. Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Michael Vick wore a similar compression shirt after injuring his ribs a few years ago and dozens of players — including Pittsburgh safety Troy Polamalu and linebacker James Harrison — use Unequal CRT in their helmets. The padding — about a half-inch thick — in Roethlisberger's shoulder pads is similar to the gear the company puts in its chest protectors for baseball catchers. Roethlisberger said last week his shoulder pads had been "juiced up" by the team trainers. Whatever he's wearing, the Steelers (7-5) are eager to have him back on the field. Roethlisberger took "90 percent" of the first-team snaps on Thursday without any major issues. LISBON — Emily Zehentbauer netted 16 points to help United remain unbeaten on the season with a 52-38 win over Lisbon on Thursday evening. Sam Spittler also reached double figures, recording ten points. MacKenzie Gatchel and Courtney Hydric each added eight for the Golden Eagles. Tiffany Ketchum also recorded 16 points to lead Lisbon in the loss. Pam Pierce chipped in with nine points, seven coming from the free-throw line, and Katy Chrismon added seven. "Very proud of my girls tonight. Lisbon is not an easy place to go play and we knew it was going to be a struggle," United head coach Sam Mathias. "The girls stayed focused and executed on both ends of the floor. Very proud of them tonight."

Senden Leads Australian Open

Eight birdies paves way to two-shot lead

Australia's John Senden watches his ball fly after chipping out of a fairway bunker on the 5th hole during the Australian Open in Sydney, Australia, Thursday. (AP Photo)

SYDNEY (AP) — John Senden shot a 6-under 66 in calm morning conditions to take a two-stroke lead after the first round of the Australian Open on Thursday. Senden had eight birdies but back-to-back bogeys at The Lakes, while Englishman Justin Rose, who birdied three of his first four holes, was level with Australians Kim Felton, Brendan Jones and Richard Green and Gareth Paddison of New Zealand after 68s. Rose dropped his only shot of the day when he muffed a greenside flop shot on the par-4 third hole, his 12th of the round. "I decided to try and hit the high, sexy lob — that didn't really come off," Rose said. Senden had a consistent year on the PGA Tour, making 19 cuts from 22 events, including five top-10 finishes.

"The results have shown in the past couple of years. I have been inside the top 30 and been consistent," Senden said. "I have taken those feelings and brought them home to Australia. I feel I can keep improving and keeping knocking on the door in every event I play." Adam Scott, who practiced with a new putter earlier in the week, used his old broomstick-style blade on Thursday and missed a 4-foot birdie attempt on his opening hole before shooting 72. "I would have loved to play better, but there's 54 holes to go. That's a lot of golf to play," Scott said. Scott's current putter, which he anchors to his chest, will be banned in 2016 under a proposed rule changes by golf's governing bodies. Among the high afternoon scores in gusting winds were eight-time major champion Tom Watson, who had a 78, and 14-year-old Chinese amateur Guan Tianling, who is likely to miss the halfway cut after an 82. Contesting the Australian Open for the first time since winning the tournament in 1984, Watson lost six shots to par over four holes from the fifth to the eighth. "I'm embarrassed," Watson said.

116 yards and one touchdown as the Browns ended a 12-game road losing streak with a 20-17 victory over the Oakland Raiders. It was a breakout performance for Gordon, who was taken in the second round of the NFL's supplemental draft in July by the Browns, who were criticized for a selection many considered too risky.

Gordon, though, has made general manager Tom Heckert's gamble pay off.

The Browns haven't had a receiver with comparable, game-breaking skills to Gordon since Braylon Edwards, who had 16 TD receptions in 2007 but then tailed off quickly and was eventually traded. Gordon has five TDs this season, the most by a Browns rookie since Andre' Davis in 2002.

And he's hungry for more.

"He's starting to get a feel for what he can do," Browns rookie quarterback Brandon Weeden said. "The sky is the limit for that guy. He's talented, he's tall, he's long, he's fast. He can catch the ball well. He does all the things you would want.

Gordon has leaned on Jackson, tight end Ben Watson and wide receiver Josh Cribbs for advice and guidance. They've explained to him the importance of working hard, using his free time wisely and striving to be consistent — on and off the field.

Gordon is following their lead. He's growing up.

There have been no missteps, just positive strides forward.

"He's young," Cribbs said. "He has an opportunity to right the ship. Nobody cares about how you fall down, it's about how you get back up. He's done a great job of bouncing back from anything that might have happened in his past and you don't see it in his future and that's a great thing.

"He's still a kid."

Gordon's ability to get deep is transforming the Browns' offense. With his ability to run past a cornerback, defenses must keep a safety back to protect against a long completion. By drawing two defenders, Browns offensive coordinator Brad Childress has noticed defenses paying more attention to Gordon, who is averaging 19 yards per catch and 46 yards on his TD grabs.

"You kind of want to know where that guy's at," Childress said.

Browns cornerback Sheldon Brown saw Gordon's potential immediately. Early in training camp, Brown, an 11-year veteran who knows every trick in the book, was covering Gordon and thought he had the youngster bottled up.

"I had perfect coverage and he stuck one hand out and catches the ball," Brown said. "He'll make a few plays in this league. The sky is the limit for him. He's still learning, but he's a talent. I just want to see him continue to grow and continue to gain confidence because he can be very special."

Brown isn't alone in his appraisal.

Te'o has been key for defense, perfect season

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — If Manti Te'o's career at Notre Dame has seemed like something straight out of a Hollywood script, perhaps it is fitting the linebacker is cast as an underdog in the final two scenes of his collegiate career.

First, he will try to become the first defense-only player to win the Heisman Trophy, going up against a couple of quarterbacks Saturday night in Texas A&M's Johnny Manziel and Kansas State's Collin Klein. Next month, he will lead the top-ranked Fighting Irish against defending champion Alabama in the BCS championship game as Notre Dame tries to become the first team since BYU in 1984 to start a season unranked and win it all.

Te'o still finds it all a bit hard to believe.

"It's something that I never — I don't think anybody could anticipate or expect. It's always a goal to be the best, to be the best you can be, and I just — I didn't think that it would be to this magnitude," he said. "I'm just very grateful to be in this situation and to represent my team."

Te'o has represented the Irish amazingly well, showing courage in playing his best game of the season just days after both his girlfriend and grandmother died a few hours apart. He never missed practice and made a season-high 12 tackles, two pass breakups and a fumble recovery in a 20-3 victory over then-No. 10 Michigan State.

A week later, on the day his girlfriend was buried, Te'o had two interceptions, leading to a touchdown and a field goal, and had two more quarterback hurries that led to interceptions in a 13-6 win over Michigan as many Irish fans were leis to show their support for the star who grew up in Hawaii.

The biggest item missing from Te'o's resume from the perspective of some Heisman Trophy voters might be that he's never passed or run for a touchdown, just about a prerequisite for winners. He has plenty of other impressive numbers, though. His seven interceptions are the most ever by a Notre Dame linebacker and the most by any linebacker since Georgia's Tony Taylor had that many in 2006. Te'o also has 103 tackles.

It was enough to impress the country's major college football coaches, who selected him the Walter Camp national player of the year on Thursday.

His coaches and teammates, though, say the numbers don't begin to tell the story of Te'o. He has been the face and heartbeat of not only the Notre Dame defense but the entire team that kept surprising naysayers, from winning at Oklahoma to those stirring goal-line stands against Stanford and Southern California.

"If a guy like Manti isn't going to win the Heisman they should just make it an offensive award and just give it to the offensive player every year and cut to the chase," coach Brian Kelly said. "He is the backbone of a 12-0 football team that has proven itself each and every week."

The only defensive player to win the trophy was Michigan cornerback Charles Woodson in 1997. But Woodson also played some wide receiver and returned punts.

Oklahoma coach Bob Stoops said he's never understood why defensive players don't win the award and believes Te'o is deserving.

"They're noted for their defense and he's the quarterback of the defense," Stoops said. "He's been the guy all year. He's been the guy and I don't think there's any question he's a guy that should have a great opportunity to win it."

Te'o showed his leadership skills before the Oklahoma game. Quarterback Everett Golson had struggled in a big game against Michigan and Te'o asked Kelly if he could talk to Golson before the game. Kelly didn't ask Te'o what he wanted to say.

"Because it's really not important for me what Manti is talking about with the quarterback because I know what he's going to say is all positive. But Everett got up with a big smile on his face. I think it set him at ease," Kelly said. "I think he impacts everybody on our football team."

With seven Heisman winners, Notre Dame has had some unconventional winners. Paul Hornung, who played quarterback, halfback and safety, is the only Heisman winner to play for a losing team. The Irish were 2-8 when he won in 1956. Quarterback John Huarte won in 1964 while leading the Irish to a 9-1 record a season after failing to letter for a 2-7 squad.

The most compelling part of Teo's story, though, is his journey. How after three mostly mediocre seasons for the team, he helped turn this season into one Irish fans will talk about for years.

The turning point may have actually come last season. After a 31-17 loss to USC last October, Kelly was asked if getting players to play like he wants at Notre Dame was a harder sell than at other schools. Kelly replied: "You can see the players that I recruited here. You know who they are. We've had one class of recruiting, kids that I've had my hand on. The other guys here are coming along, but it's a process. It can't happen overnight. They're getting there. They're making good progress."

That upset some players, with Te'o tweeting: "Playin for my bros and that's it!!!!"

Kelly apologized for his remarks.

"I think anytime in a family there are going to be some disagreements," Kelly said. "Maybe the way I did it wasn't the appropriate way. But I think it was pretty clear that we understood each other in terms of what my expectations were. I just wish I handled it better."

The Irish came together after that, with Te'o the catalyst as the Irish won four of their next five.

The fact that a Mormon from Hawaii who hates cold weather wound up at a Roman Catholic university in a northern Indiana city that averages more than 70 inches of snow a year seems unlikely, especially considering he was such a big fan of archival USC growing up that he was in tears when the Irish nearly upset the Trojans in 2005.

Te'o wore shorts and flip-flops for his campus visit during a blustery November weekend when some in the crowd threw snowballs at Irish players during an embarrassing 24-23 loss to Syracuse, the first eight-loss team to ever beat the Irish.

Te'o has said the game didn't play a role in his decision. What did, though, was his English teacher showing the movie "Dead Poets Society" on the eve of signing day in February 2009. Te'o had already decided he was going to USC, but a character in the film struggling with a difficult life choice prompted Te'o to rethink his choice. He prayed, and something told him to go to Notre Dame.

He prayed again following his freshman season about whether to return or go on a Mormon mission. He did the same thing again a year ago when he was deciding whether to enter the NFL draft or return for his senior season.

His seven interceptions are the most ever by a Notre Dame linebacker and the most by any linebacker since Georgia's Tony Taylor had that many in 2006. Te'o also has 103 tackles.

It was enough to impress the country's major college football coaches, who selected him the Walter Camp national player of the year on Thursday.

His coaches and teammates, though, say the numbers don't begin to tell the story of Te'o. He has been the face and heartbeat of not only the Notre Dame defense but the entire team that kept surprising naysayers, from winning at Oklahoma to those stirring goal-line stands against Stanford and Southern California.

"If a guy like Manti isn't going to win the Heisman they should just make it an offensive award and just give it to the offensive player every year and cut to the chase," coach Brian Kelly said. "He is the backbone of a 12-0 football team that has proven itself each and every week."

The only defensive player to win the trophy was Michigan cornerback Charles Woodson in 1997. But Woodson also played some wide receiver and returned punts.

Oklahoma coach Bob Stoops said he's never understood why defensive players don't win the award and believes Te'o is deserving.

"They're noted for their defense and he's the quarterback of the defense," Stoops said. "He's been the guy all year. He's been the guy and I don't think there's any question he's a guy that should have a great opportunity to win it."

Te'o showed his leadership skills before the Oklahoma game. Quarterback Everett Golson had struggled in a big game against Michigan and Te'o asked Kelly if he could talk to Golson before the game. Kelly didn't ask Te'o what he wanted to say.

"Because it's really not important for me what Manti is talking about with the quarterback because I know what he's going to say is all positive. But Everett got up with a big smile on his face. I think it set him at ease," Kelly said. "I think he impacts everybody on our football team."

With seven Heisman winners, Notre Dame has had some unconventional winners. Paul Hornung, who played quarterback, halfback and safety, is the only Heisman winner to play for a losing team. The Irish were 2-8 when he won in 1956. Quarterback John Huarte won in 1964 while leading the Irish to a 9-1 record a season after failing to letter for a 2-7 squad.

The most compelling part of Teo's story, though, is his journey. How after three mostly mediocre seasons for the team, he helped turn this season into one Irish fans will talk about for years.

The turning point may have actually come last season. After a 31-17 loss to USC last October, Kelly was asked if getting players to play like he wants at Notre Dame was a harder sell than at other schools. Kelly replied: "You can see the players that I recruited here. You know who they are. We've had one class of recruiting, kids that I've had my hand on. The other guys here are coming along, but it's a process. It can't happen overnight. They're getting there. They're making good progress."

That upset some players, with Te'o tweeting: "Playin for my bros and that's it!!!!"

Kelly apologized for his remarks.

"I think anytime in a family there are going to be some disagreements," Kelly said. "Maybe the way I did it wasn't the appropriate way. But I think it was pretty clear that we understood each other in terms of what my expectations were. I just wish I handled it better."

The Irish came together after that, with Te'o the catalyst as the Irish won four of their next five.

The fact that a Mormon from Hawaii who hates cold weather wound up at a Roman Catholic university in a northern Indiana city that averages more than 70 inches of snow a year seems unlikely, especially considering he was such a big fan of archival USC growing up that he was in tears when the Irish nearly upset the Trojans in 2005.

Te'o wore shorts and flip-flops for his campus visit during a blustery November weekend when some in the crowd threw snowballs at Irish players during an embarrassing 24-23 loss to Syracuse, the first eight-loss team to ever beat the Irish.

Te'o has said the game didn't play a role in his decision. What did, though, was his English teacher showing the movie "Dead Poets Society" on the eve of signing day in February 2009. Te'o had already decided he was going to USC, but a character in the film struggling with a difficult life choice prompted Te'o to rethink his choice. He prayed, and something told him to go to Notre Dame.

He prayed again following his freshman season about whether to return or go on a Mormon mission. He did the same thing again a year ago when he was deciding whether to enter the NFL draft or return for his senior season.

He believes what has happened to him this season shows the power or prayer.

"I think for anybody who's questioning if God lives, he lives, and I'm an example of that. For those who don't know if he answers your prayers, he does, because he answered mine. If he didn't answer prayers, I wouldn't be here. I wouldn't have come here. I definitely wouldn't have come back for my senior year. And I wouldn't have done a lot of things that I've done," he said.

Te'o hopes he'll leave a legacy, which he surely will if the Irish beat Alabama next month and win their first national championship since 1988. But the main thing he wants is to be remembered as someone who gave his best.

"If you don't do things to be the best at it, why are you doing it? So I'm just trying to be the best," he said. "Once I leave here, I hope that the impact I've made not only on the football field but in people's lives will forever be remembered."

ordinator Todd Haley said. "Now I don't know what he's feeling when he's doing some of those things. But it looks like he's moving around pretty good."

Roethlisberger said he felt "good" but declined to expand. Haley doesn't expect there to be any limitations to the playbook though he joked he might not call as many designed run plays for his quarterback, who never met a play he didn't like to extend.

"I think he understands his body better than anybody," Haley said. "He's the one that's got to make the decisions and we'll just try to put him in the best positions to succeed."

The Steelers won 1-2 in Roethlisberger's absence, including a 23-20 victory over Baltimore last week behind backup Charlie Batch. While Batch's steady performance against the Ravens kept Pittsburgh's playoff hopes alive, the team hopes to hit its stride with a healthy Roethlisberger under center.

"When Ben's in it's just a whole different level of game planning and things that teams have to do just to compensate for how athletic he is," wide receiver Mike

Wallace said. "I think he brings a dimension to the team that nobody else can bring."

Center Circle competitive youth basketball

SALEM — The Salem Community Center's new competitive basketball league is set to provide children in grades 2-6 the opportunity to play at the next level. Participants will face stiffer competition and a more aggressive style of play.

The league will be played on Sundays beginning Jan. 6 and concluding Feb. 24. Cost is $200 per team (does not include referee fees) with a five-player minimum/12 player maximum roster size. Deadline for registration is Dec. 12. Registration is done on a team basis and teams may be co-ed, but it is not a requirement. The league is open to players in grades 4-6.

Please register at the SCC Front Desk or by phone at 330-332-5885. For more information please visit www.salemcommunitycenter.com.

Winter adult volleyball league set

SALEM — Registration is now open through Dec. 17 for the upcoming Winter Adult Co-ed Volleyball League. The league will run Jan. 6 through March 17 and conclude with a single elimination tournament to determine the league champion. The cost of the league is $200 and offers both recreational and competitive divisions. Space is limited.

Visit www.salemcommunitycenter.com or call 330-332-5885 for more information.

Friday night adult hoops league

SALEM — The Salem Community Center's Friday Night Adult Basketball will run every Friday from Dec. 14 through March 29 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Cost is $3 each Friday per player. All money will be collected at Center Circle. There are no teams for this event as it is run as an open gym/pick-up game.

Session 2 Soccer registration open

SALEM — Registration for the Center Circle Salem Indoor Sports Complex Session 2 Soccer is currently open. Open Registration will be held Dec. 5 through Dec. 18. The league will run Jan. 7 through Feb. 24 (seven weeks).

The cost per team is $490 (does not include referee fees and is non-refundable). Divisions will be available for U8 through Over 30.

Please register at the SCC Front Desk or by phone at 330-332-5885 to ensure your spot.

NHL rejects players' offer to break labor impasse

NEW YORK (AP) — Instead of closing in on a deal, the NHL and the players' association are further apart than ever before.

Union executive director Donald Fehr began the first of his two news conferences Thursday night by proclaiming he believed the sides had agreements on such issues as actual dollars, and then returned moments later to reveal the NHL rejected everything his side offered.

Hot-button topics such as the "make-whole" provision on existing contracts not only weren't settled, but are no longer being offered by the league. Forget that owners were willing to pay up to $300 million to cover the costs, now Commissioner Gary Bettman is saying the entire concept is off the table — along with everything else the league proposed during the previous two days of talks.

"They knew there was a major gulf between us and yet they came down here and told you we were close," deputy commissioner Bill Daly said.

Fehr vehemently disputed that assessment and stuck to his opinion that the sides really aren't far apart, saying they are "clearly very close if not on top of one another."

When the NHL agreed to increase its make-whole offer of deferred payments from $211 million to $300 million it was part of a proposed package that required the union to agree on three nonnegotiable points. Instead, the players' association accepted the raise in funds, but then made counterproposals on the issues the league stated had no wiggle room.

That ended Thursday's delayed meeting after just an hour and sent the NHL negotiating team back to the league office.

"I am disappointed beyond belief," Bettman said. "We're going to take a deep breath and look back at where we are and what needs to be accomplished."

The sides won't meet again before Saturday at the earliest. While Bettman insisted that a drop-dead date for a deal that would preserve a season with "integrity" hasn't been established — even internally — clearly there isn't a lot of time to work out an agreement.

"I'm surprised," Pittsburgh Penguins star Sidney Crosby said. "We feel like we moved in their direction."

The 2004-05 season was lost completely before the players' association accepted a deal that included a salary cap for the first time. While no major philosophical issues such as that exist in these negotiations, the sides still don't appear to be ready to come to an agreement.

"It looks like this is not going to be resolved in the immediate future," Fehr said. A 48-game season was played in 1995 after a lockout stretched into January. Bettman said he wouldn't have a season shorter than that.

As Donald Fehr was painting a positive picture, Daly was calling Fehr's brother, Steve — the union's special counsel — to say that the NHL was rejecting the players' counteroffer. Once the union was unwilling to accept the league's three main conditions, nothing else mattered.

"Not only is it unusual, I would be hard-pressed to think of anything comparable in my experience," Steve Fehr said about the instant rejection.

The NHL wants to limit personal player contracts to five years, seven for a club's own player, and has elevated the issue to the highest level of importance. The union countered with an offer of an eight-year maximum length with the variable in salary being no greater than a 25 percent difference between the highest-paid year of the deal and the lowest.

"It's the hill we will die on," said Daly, who added that the owners were "insulted" by the players' response to the owners' offer Wednesday night.

The other sticking points the NHL demanded of the players are a 10-year term on the new agreement, with a mutual opt-out option after eight years, and no compliance buy-outs or caps on escrow in the transition phase to the new structure. The union presented an offer of an eight-year deal with a reopener after six.

The NHL believes that the union merely wants to take the parts of the offer it wants and then try to negotiate on the other conditions that make those parts possible.

If you wish select one of the following FREE verses below to accompany your tribute.

- We hold you in our thoughts and memories forever.
- May God cradle you in His arms, now and forever.
- Forever missed, never forgotten. May God hold you in the palm of His hand.
- Thank you for the wonderful days we shared together. My prayers will be with you until we meet again.
- The days we shared were sweet. I long to see you again in God's heavenly glory.
- Your courage and bravery still inspire us all, and the memory of your smile fills us with joy.
- Though out of sight, you'll forever be in heart and mind.
- The days may come and go, but the times we shared will always remain.
- May God's angels guide you and protect you throughout time.
- You were a light in our life that burns forever in our hearts.
- May God's graces shine over you for all time.
- You are in our thoughts and prayers from morning to night and from year to year.
- We send this message with a loving kiss for eternal rest and happiness.
- May the Lord bless you with His graces and warm, loving heart.
